Ndan is a young princess from Cydonia with a sense of adventure, a desire to see the world, and skilled with both sword and conversation, but yet is burdened with the need to tempt fate with her own destruction in order to feel alive. When an invitation is delivered to visit the Imperial city of RUNE and attend the Crimson Court, where a single wrong word is as lethal as any sword, all of Ndan's longings seemed to be answered. However the thrill seeking princess has her enthusiasm doused when she becomes entangled in a plot hatched by the devious Mendax Vilfer, the Emperor's advisor, and Ndan finds herself separated from her father, the King of Cydonia, and alone among her kingdom's worst enemies at the Crimson Court.

This is part one of the Crimson Court series and is thirty seven pages in length.
