Not illustrated. 1891 edition. Excerpt: ...composing something Symonds. in verse or prose for my own pleasure; while I also spent great pains upon a weekly essay for my tutor, Professor Jowett. His observations, and the criticisms my father occasionally gave me, were extremely helpful. They checked my tendency to a vague and sentimental rhetoric. "Great facility of expression has always been my bane, combined with a natural partiality for sensuous imagery. I attribute any degree of strength and purity of style to which I may subsequently have attained in no small measure--(1) to the composition of essays on very metaphysical topics for so good a critic as Professor Jowett; (2) to the habit of translation from the Greek. I was fortunate in enjoying the intimate friendship of Professor Conington, who also helped me by sound advice. His own style was clear and vigorous, without affectation. He laughed me out of many of my conceits and prettinesses. All this while I kept on composing English verses; the style modelled, by sympathy rather than calculation, upon Tennyson and Keats. But Conington was convinced that I could not be a poet, and his discouraging influence prevented me from J. A. studying poetry with system. The only wrong Symonds. direction I am aware of having received from any one was from him, when he once said: 'Your forte lies in poetical prose.' I took the hint too literally; and when I felt inclined to write verse, used often to compel myself to prose expression, the result of which was that I got into a hybrid habit of writing which has given offence to many of my critics. I ought to add that from the age of eighteen to twenty-four I kept a diary, chiefly for the description of impressions made on me by landscapes and works of art. This I am quite sure helped to...
